the grumman f4f wildcat and the mitsubishi a6m zero sen were contemporaries although designed to very different requirements the wildcat ruggedly built to survive the rigors of carrier operations was the best carrier fighter the us navy had available when the usa entered world war ii and it remained the principal fighter for the us navy and the us marine corps until 1942-43 with a speed greater than 300mph exceptional manoeuvrability long range and an impressive armament the slick zero sen could outperform any allied fighter in 1941-42 the battles between the wildcat and the zero sen during 1942 represent a classic duel in which pilots flying a nominally inferior fighter successfully developed air combat tactics that negated the strengths of their opponent the raf introduced the avro lancaster in 1942 and used it to spearhead this aerial offensive in response the luftwaffe created an elite nightfighter force based primarily upon the bf 110 the luftwaffe was quick to equip it with airborne radar that allowed it to intercept and destroy lancasters over germany in turn the raf adopted countermeasures such as the monica rearward looking radar to alert lancaster crews to the approach of nightfighters in may 1943 the luftwaffe suddenly developed a novel technical and tactical approach to attacking raf bombers the new tactic proved amazingly successful and british bombers could be attacked from below with no warning for its part the raf failed to detect the new german tactic for six crucial months during which time its lancaster bombers were almost defenceless against this new threat in time however the german advantage of surprise was lost and the raf developed countermeasures to deal with the new threat the duel between upgraded bf 110s and lancasters in the night skies over germany became increasingly dominated by cutting edge technology which would determine the efficacy of strategic bombing this third volume of a successful mini series examines the german infantryman in the latter part of world war ii despite being constantly in retreat often short of equipment sometimes hungry cold and wet and the overwhelming numbers of soviet troops and armour facing him the german infantryman's resistance was always fierce and although constantly moving back towards germany his defensive withdrawals cost the russians dearly during this period defensive tactics involved close artillery and tank cooperation even at small unit level containing previously unpublished photographs and poignant first hand accounts this book explores in superb detail daily life duties and combat action
