Chapter 2 of most AP Statistics textbooks typically covers the fundamentals of describing and visualizing data This includes Describing distributions This involves identifying the shape symmetric skewed left skewed right uniform center mean median mode and spread range interquartile range standard deviation of a dataset You'll need to be comfortable interpreting these characteristics from both numerical summaries and graphical displays

Data visualization Mastering the creation and interpretation of various graphs is crucial This includes Histograms Understanding bin width and its impact on the shape of the histogram Boxplots Boxandwhisker plots Identifying outliers quartiles and the median Stemplots Stemandleaf plots Understanding their construction and interpretation Scatterplots Visualizing relationships between two quantitative variables Measuring central tendency and variability

This goes beyond simply calculating the mean and standard deviation You need to understand when to use each measure mean vs median standard deviation vs IQR and how they relate to the shape of the distribution

Interpreting context This is arguably the most important skill You need to be able to translate statistical findings back into the context of the problem Don't just state the numbers explain what they mean in the real world
