Europe cities in transition is an innovative roadmap for sustainability in changing cities

Across European cities the use of urban space is controversial and subject to diverging interests. On the one hand, citizens are increasingly aware of the necessity for self-organising to reclaim green spaces; on the other hand, local authorities have started to involve citizens in the governance of urban green spaces. While an increased level of citizen participation and conducive conditions for citizens' self-organisation are a desirable development per se, the risk of functionalising civil society actors by the local authority for neoliberal city development must be kept in mind. Drawing on qualitative and quantitative data collected in 29 European cities from all four European geographic regions, this book examines the governance of urban green spaces and urban food production, focusing on the contribution of citizen-driven activities over the course of the book. Schicklinski identifies best practice examples of successful collaboration between citizens and local government. The book concludes with policy recommendations with great practical value for local governance in European cities. In times of the growth turn, this book will be of great relevance to students, scholars, and policy makers with an interest in environmental governance, urban geography, and sustainable development.

This book examines various aspects of changes to business behavior through the lenses of the twin pillars of sustainability: responsibility and governance. It discusses whether the focus of corporate social responsibility has changed so much that we need to think about redefinitions of key concepts in the field and analyses both the theory and practice in a variety of ways to enable conclusions to be drawn about the changes needed to any definitions. This approach is based on the tradition of the social responsibility research network, which in its 15-year history has sought to broaden the discourse and to treat all research as inter-related and relevant to business. This book consists of the best contributions from the 16th International Conference on Corporate Social Responsibility and 7th Organisational Governance Conference held in Derby, United Kingdom, in August/September 2017.

This book aims to offer a comprehensive overview of the issues facing organizations when deciding whether to accept e-commerce as a platform for business. It provides a detailed evaluation of how the implementation of e-commerce may affect all parties within the supply chain: suppliers, retailers, and consumers. It also compares various opportunities and threats of accepting e-commerce in order to conclude whether it might offer access to a new digital era or whether it is an uncertain option yielding potential pitfalls. This book helps to reveal existing and future consequences of e-commerce acceptance, which are crucial for business decisions and operations in the present and going forward. It therefore provides a unique insight into emerging e-commerce platform acceptance and is one of the first to provide a holistic perspective of how each party in the supply chain is affected by e-commerce acceptance. E-commerce is bringing into view more flexible, effective, and efficient ways of conducting business activities among suppliers, retailers, and consumers. It is not limited to time and space, and therefore this digital platform has already established for itself a major role in today's world economy. Despite promised benefits, however, threats emerge which need to be faced when turning to the virtual marketplace, all of which have to be acknowledged before businesses will shift and adapt to the e-commerce platform. This book is intended for postgraduate students, executive MBA students, and researchers interested in information management, marketing, and operations management.
