the case studies in this book focus on the emergence extent and nature of national policies on ageing and associated strategies to address long term care needs key opportunities for and constraints on policy are identified in this first round of regional studies written by prominent researchers in hong kong korea malaysia singapore and thailand who are partners in the ageing research network of the asian development research forum the case studies are set in the context of regional and international plans of action on ageing and the deliberations of the second world assembly on ageing held in 2002

if modernisation means mass longevity it raises hopes that everyone may enjoy a full span of years it also brings the fear that many will not be able to take care of themselves and will rely upon society to provide special care modernisation in this sense also means the rise of the welfare state let the government take care of the frail and the old mass aging has proven to be a financial crisis for welfare states in the advanced economies of the west it also raises questions about the future of family based care in the east while professionals and academicians in the advanced economies of the west continue to debate about whose responsibility it is to take care of the elders the state or the individual governments in east asia hold firmly to the position that it is the family that has the primary responsibility to take care of old members and that the government s role is to assist families in discharging elder care responsibilities this publication examines some of the often raised questions identified in the research literature in the past 25 years for example the nature and scope of caregiving the issue of care burden and the claim that family based care is really women care that is sex biased the author marshals evidence to show from studies conducted in china that care burden is a complex form of social relations that is shaped by the culture furthermore the gender and type of relations may largely determine in what type of kin relations are the subjective feelings of burden the greatest and where objective indications of burden may remain constant in conclusion the author suggests that the best common resolution for both the east and the west is to establish a workable partnership between the state and the family in facing the forthcoming crisis of elder care in a fully aged society
