this introduction to west indian poetry is written for readers making their first approach to the poetry of the caribbean written in english it offers a comprehensive literary history from the 1920s to the 1980s with particular attention to the relationship of west indian poetry to european african and american literature close readings of individual poems give detailed analysis of social and cultural issues at work in the writing laurence breiner s exposition speaks powerfully about the defining forces in caribbean culture from colonialism to resistance and decolonization

the author writes franny came out in the new yorker in 1955 and was swiftly followed in 1957 by zooey both stories are early critical entries in a narrative series i m doing about a family of settlers in twentieth century new york the glasses it is a long term project patently an ambiguous one and there is a real enough danger i suppose that sooner or later i ll bog down perhaps disappear entirely in my own methods locutions and mannerisms on the whole though i m very hopeful i love working on these glass stories i ve been waiting for them most of my life and i think i have fairly decent monomaniacal plans to finish them with due care and all available skill two stories about the glass family narrated by buddy glass and centered on buddy s older brother seymour an international movement that followed specific geographical cultural patterns conceptual art built on the legacy of marcel duchamp redefining the institutional and social relationships among production work and audience in ways which have comprehensively transformed the nature of the art object and forms of artistic practice both historically and in the present investigating and documenting the histories theories and forms of conceptual art this timely book including both established writers and a new generation of art historians shows that conceptual art was a broad movement encompassing a range of artistic tendencies this is the most stimulating account of the movement to date arguing forcefully for its vitality and potential as well as examining its influence on art today with essays by alex alberro stephen bann jon bird david campany helen molesworth michael newman peter osborne birgit pelzer desa philipagesi anne rorimer peter wollen and william wood a tiny african american baby lies in a hospital incubator tubes protruding from his nostrils head and limbs he couldn't take the hit the caption warns if you're pregnant don't take drugs ten years earlier this billboard would have been largely unintelligible to many of us but when it appeared in 1991 it immediately conjured up several powerful images the helpless infant himself his unseen environment a newborn intensive care unit filled with babies crying inconsolably and the mother who did this crack addicted and unrepentant misconceiving mother is a case study of how public policy about reproduction and crime is made Laura E. Goetz uses secondary research and first hand interviews with legislators and prosecutors to examine attitudes toward the criminalization and/or medicalization of drug use during pregnancy by the legislature and criminal justice system in California she traces how an initial tendency toward criminalization gave way to a trend toward seeing the problem of crack babies as an issue of social welfare and public health it is no surprise that in an atmosphere of mother blaming particularly targeted at poor women and women of color crack babies so easily captured the American popular imagination in the late 1980s what is surprising is the way prenatal drug exposure came to be institutionalized in the state apparatus Goetz attributes this circumstance to four interrelated causes the gendered nature of the social problem the recasting of the problem as fundamentally medical rather than criminal the dynamic nature of the process of institutionalization and the specific features of the legal institutions that is the legislature and prosecutors offices that became prominent in the case at one level misconceiving mother tells the story of a particular problem at a particular time and place how the California legislature and district attorneys grappled with pregnant women's drug use in the late 1980s and early 1990s at another level the book tells a more general story about the political nature of contemporary social problems the story it tells is political not just because it deals with the character of political institutions but because the process itself and the nature of the claims making concern the power to control the allocation of state resources a number of studies have looked at how the initial criminalization of social problems takes place misconceiving mother looks at the process by which a criminalized social problem is institutionalized through the attitudes and policies of elite decision makers author note Laura E. Goetz is acting professor of law and sociology university of California Los Angeles a feverish expectation of the end of the world seems an unlikely accompaniment to middle class respectability but it was precisely her interest in millennial thinking that led jane shaw to a group of genteel terraced townhouses in the english county town of bedford inside their unassuming grey brick exteriors shaw found something extraordinary for here within the ark lived two members of the panacea society last survivors of the remaining southcottian prophetic communities in britain and these individuals were the heirs to a rich archive charting not just their own apocalyptic sect but also the histories of the many groups and their leaders who from the early nineteenth century onwards had followed the beliefs of the self styled prophetess and prospective mother of the messiah shiloh joanna southcott who died in 1814 placing its subjects in a global context this is the first book to explore the religious thinking of all the southcottians it reveals a transnational movement with striking and innovative ideas not just about prophecy and the coming apocalypse but also about politics gender class and authority the volume will sell to scholars and students of religion and cultural studies as well as social history originally published in 1992 this is a wide ranging text concerned with the principles and practice of neuropsychological assessment in adults it combines a flexible hypothesis testing approach to assessment with information on specialised test batteries the book covers the major areas of memory language perception attention and executive dysfunctions and includes chapters on dementia alcohol drug and toxic conditions stroke and closed head injury assessment of dysfunction in cases involving claims for compensation and chapters on specialised assessment techniques including automated test procedures are provided the book presents a sound introduction to this complex area and gives guidelines for the clinician who may need concise information on a specialised topic kant in context the historical primacy of the transcendental dialectic examines the introduction of kant s critical philosophy through the lens of historical contextualization daniel patrick kelly argues that kant s seismic copernican epistemic turn must be adequately positioned and understood within the german philosophical landscape that developed in spinoza s wake this necessary historical analysis illuminates the development and comparative strength of kant s emergent transcendental idealism however in order to render the introduction of kant s critical system sufficient to this historical task this book heuristically organizes the contents of the critique of pure reason to highlight the work s meta philosophical historical conclusions in this revised take on kant s critique kelly argues that the transcendental aesthetic and subsequent transcendental dialectic emerge as foundational in understanding kant's critique as a profound historical methodological development as they justify and ground the call for his new and supporting science of cognition placing the transcendental analytic as inherently secondary in this heuristic reading of the critique the author's overarching contention is that kant's identification of the dialectical limitations of metaphysical reasoning provides a more solid justification for kant's transcendental idealism than that of the novel postulates of the analytic
