in the centuries before europeans crossed the atlantic social and material relations among the indigenous guaraní people of present day paraguay were based on reciprocal gift giving but the spanish and portuguese newcomers who arrived in the sixteenth century seemed interested in the guaraní only to advance their own interests either through material exchange or by getting the guaraní to serve them this book tells the story of how europeans felt empowered to pursue individual gain in the new world and how the guaraní people confronted this challenge to their very way of being although neither guaraní nor europeans were positioned to grasp the larger meaning of the moment their meeting was part of a global sea change in human relations and the nature of economic exchange brian p owensby uses the centuries long encounter between europeans and the indigenous people of south america to reframe the notion of economic gain as a historical development rather than a matter of human nature owensby argues that gain the pursuit of individual material self interest must be understood as a global development that transformed the lives of europeans and non europeans wherever these two encountered each other in the great european expansion spanning the sixteenth to nineteenth centuries in early medieval europe monasticism constituted a significant force in society because the prayers of the religious on behalf of others featured as powerful currency the study of this phenomenon is at once full of potential and peril rightly drawing attention to the wider social involvement of an otherwise exclusive group but also describing a religious community in terms of its service provision previous scholarship has focused on the supply and demand of prayer within the medieval economy of power patronage and gift exchange intercessory prayer and the monastic ideal in the time of the carolingian reforms is the first volume to explain how this transactional dimension of prayer factored into monastic spirituality rene s choy uncovers the relationship between the intercessory function of monasteries and the ascetic concern for moral conversion in the minds of prominent religious leaders active between c 750 820 through sustained analysis of the devotional thought of benedict of aniane and contemporaneous religious reformers during the reigns of charlemagne and louis the pious choy examines key topics in the study of carolingian monasticism liturgical organization and the intercessory performances of the mass and the divine office monastic theology and relationships of prayer within monastic communities and with the world outside arguing that monastic leaders showed new interest on the intersection between the interiority of prayer and the functional world of social relationships this study reveals the ascetic ideal undergirding the provision of intercessory prayer by monasteries
