after world war ii thousands of japanese throughout asia were put on trial for war crimes examination of postwar trials is now a thriving area of research but sharon w chamberlain is the first to offer an authoritative assessment of the legal proceedings convened in the philippines these were trials conducted by asians not western powers and centered on the abuses suffered by local inhabitants rather than by prisoners of war her impressively researched work reveals the challenges faced by the philippines as a newly independent nation in navigating issues of justice amid domestic and international pressures chamberlain highlights the differing views of filipinos and japanese about the trials the philippine government aimed to show its commitment to impartial proceedings with just outcomes in japan it appeared that defendants were selected arbitrarily judges and prosecutors were biased and lower ranking soldiers were punished for crimes ordered by their superior officers she analyzes the broader implications of this divergence as bilateral relations between the two nations evolved and contends that these competing narratives were reimagined in a way that paradoxically aided a path toward postwar reconciliation this innovative volume examines the nexus between war crimes trials and the pursuit of collaborators in post war asia global standards of behaviour in time of war underpinned the prosecution of japanese military personnel in allied courts in asia and the pacific japan s contradictory roles in the second world war as brutal oppressor of conquered regions in asia and as liberator of asia from both western colonialism and stultifying tradition set the stage for a tangled legal and political debate just where did colonized and oppressed peoples owe their loyalties in time of war and where did the balance of responsibility lie between individuals and nations but global standards jostled uneasily with the pluralism of the western colonial order in asia where legal rights depended on race and nationality in the end these limits led to profound dissatisfaction with the trials process despite its vast scale and ambitious intentions which has implications until today in 1995 the fiftieth anniversary of the end of the second world war occasioned many reflections on the place of science and technology in the conflict that the war ended with allied victory in the pacific theatre inevitably focussed attention upon the pacific region and particularly upon the manhattan project and its outcome it was in the pacific that western physics and engineering gave birth to the atomic age however the pacific war had also proved a testing time and a testing space for other disciplines and institutions extreme environments and operational distances and the fundamental demands of logistics required the allies and the japanese to innovate many scientific and technological practices just as medicine and botany were called upon to fight tropical diseases and insect pests so engineers anthropologists and geographers were called upon to understand local conditions and climates and to work with local peoples whose traditional lives were changed forever by the experience at the same time the war played midwife to a host of new developments not least in scientific intelligence and in chemical and biological weapons which were to acquire far greater importance after 1945
