the result of extensive archival recovery work ellen brinks s study fills a significant gap in our understanding of women s literary history of the south asian subcontinent under colonialism and of indian women s contributions and responses to developing cultural and political nationalism as brinks shows the invisibility of anglophone indian women writers cannot be explained simply as a matter of colonial marginalization or as a function of dominant theoretical approaches that reduce indian women to the status of figures or tropes the received narrative that british imperialism in india was perpetuated with little cultural contact between the colonizers and the colonized population is complicated by writers such as toru dutt krupabai saththianadhan pandita ramabai cornelia sorabji and sarojini naidu all five women found large audiences for their literary works in india and in great britain and all five were also deeply rooted in and connected to both south asian and western cultures their works created new zones of cultural contact and exchange that challenge postcolonial theory s tendencies towards abstract notions of the colonized women as passive and of english as a de facto instrument of cultural domination brinks s close readings of these texts suggest new ways of reading a range of issues central to postcolonial studies the relationship of colonized women to the metropolitan literary culture indian and english women s separate and joint engagements in reformist and nationalist struggles the translatability of culture the articulation strategies and complex negotiations of self identification of anglophone indian women writers and the significance and place of cultural difference although indian women s short fiction has always enjoyed equal importance and popularity as their novels very little critical attention has been paid to it so far indian women s short fiction seeks to fulfil this long felt need it puts together fifteen perceptive and analytical articles by scholars across the world the articles which are focussed on native indian writing as well as diasporic short fiction deal with such interesting literary issues as construction of femininity disablement and enablement bengali heritage hybrid identities nostalgia representation of the partition violence tradition and modernity and cultural perspectivism it is hoped that the book will prove useful to scholars interested in short fiction studies in general and indian women s short fiction in particular an innovative analysis of how ideas of indian identity negotiated within the indian diaspora in trinidad affect cultural identities back home in india india s endemic gender based violence has received increased international scrutiny and provoked waves of domestic protest and activism in recent years related studies on india and south asia have proliferated but their analyses often fail to identify why violence flourishes unwilling to simply accept patriarchy as the answer tamsin bradley presents new research examining how different groups in india conceptualise violence against women revealing beliefs around religion caste and gender that render aggression socially acceptable she also analyses the role that neoliberalism and its corollary consumerism play in reducing women to commodity objects for barter or exchange unpacking varied conservative liberal and neoliberal ideologies active in india today bradley argues that they can converge unexpectedly to normalise violence against women due to these complex and overlapping factors rates of violence against women in india have actually increased despite decades of feminist campaigning this book will be crucial to those studying indian gender politics and violence but also presents new data and methodologies which have practical implications for researchers and policymakers worldwide
