Transcendence in general and transformation in particular have long been established as key motifs in apocalypses. The transformation of a seer during a heavenly journey is found commonly in such esoteric apocalypses as I Enoch. No heavenly journey occurs in the apocalypses treated here; rather, symbolic women figures, ladies in the classical sense who are associated with God's city or tower, undergo transformation at key points in the action. The surface structures of Joseph and Aseneth, 4 Ezra, The Apocalypse, and The Shepherd of Hermas are traced, and the crucial transformation episodes are located within each structure. Transformation of figures which represent God's people points to the significance of identity within the apocalyptic perspective. Earlier analyses have demonstrated that the apocalyptic perspective urges the reader to consider life from a different stance in time and in space. Temporal and spatial axes. The present analysis suggests that the apocalypse also charts its revelations along an axis of identity so that the reader is invited to become as it were someone more in tune with the mysteries he or she is viewing. Of special interest is the treatment of the increasingly well-known romance Joseph and Aseneth alongside apocalypses, a parallel which is fruitful because of the curious visionary sequence closely related to apocalypse in content and form which is found in the inner centre of that work.

Throughout his life, Isaac remained a passive tent dweller. He did not go to find a wife; his servant brought a wife to him. He did not go to war, and when conflict arose, he withdrew. In the story of his binding, he was passive, and it appears as though he was bound forever on the altar. Isaac was dominated by his father, Abraham. His wife, Rebecca, Abimelech, king of Gerar, and his sons, Jacob and Esau, for most of his life, he is led by others, and his actions are reactions to the developing situations. He appears to have little personality and is better known as the son of his father, Abraham, or the father of his sons, Jacob and Esau.
