for millennia the normal natural and pleasurable activity of eating has been surrounded by fear and anxiety religious traditions have long decreed what foods are right for their followers to eat but secularisation and scientific progress have not made the situation easier our present obsession with health obesity ethics and science has seemingly developed from a society that is over supplied with the necessities of life for the first time social historian stephen halliday looks at the history of our fascinating relationship with food from galen in the first century ad declaring that fruit was the worst kind of food to eat to john kellogg s belief that eating wholegrain cereals would prevent masturbation and bring people closer to god through modern fears and food scares such as mad cow disease to our current fascination with superfoods friendly bacteria and organic farming our troubles with food is a thorough analysis of our changing attitudes towards food and a reminder that we are not so very different from our forbears after all we all witness in advertising and on supermarket shelves the fierce competition for our food dollars in this title the author reveals how the competition really works and how it affects our health it illustrates food politics in action watered down government dietary advice diet supplements promoted as if they were first amendment rights over the last century the industrialization of agriculture and processing technologies have made food abundant and relatively inexpensive for much of the world s population simultaneously pesticides nitrates and other technological innovations intended to improve the food supply s productivity and safety have generated new often poorly understood risks for consumers and the environment from the proliferation of synthetic additives to the threat posed by antibiotic resistant bacteria the chapters in risk on the table zero in on key historical cases in north america and europe that illuminate the history of food safety highlighting the powerful tensions that exists among scientific understandings of risk policymakers decisions and cultural notions of pure food
